BLIZZARDS PREVAIL THROUGH MID-WEST; TEMPERATURES DROP

Heavy Snows Again Stall Traffic; Two Frozen

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Blizzards and below zero temperatures were common throughout the central states today as winter sent its second severe cold wave of the past week out of the Canadian northwest.

The frigid wave sent temperatures tumbling from the Rocky Mountains on the west to the Atlantic seaboard in the east.

Northwestern Colorado reported temperatures ranging from forty-five degrees below zero to fifty-two degrees below. Parts of Wyoming suffered temperatures which fell as low as thirty-five degrees below zero.

Heavy snows in the mountain calling a St. Louis-San Francisco Friday's storm. A blizzard which ripped Oklahoma succeeded in halting a St. Louis-San Francisco train near Mustang, Okla. Seventy passengers, including Governor Hallway of Oklahoma, are held prisoners in the train.

The northern states of Minnesota, North Dakota and Montana are once more suffering in temperatures ranging from 22 below zero to 40 below.

In Chicago the mercury descended one degree an hour during the night, hovering at the 6 below mark at dawn. In the Chicago area, Milwaukee, with a temperature of ten degrees below zero, was the coldest spot.

Two deaths were attributed to the cold wave here yesterday when Steven Francisiewicz, 40, was found frozen to death after he wandered from his home only partially clothed.

Mrs. Louis Brown was found dead in a chair beside a stove in her home.

No relief is in sight before the end of the week, according to C. D. Pannell, government forecaster. Pannell said the temperature in the great Lakes region will stand near the zero mark for the rest of the week.

FIVE DEAD IN PLANE CRASH

Ship Hits Cliff In France; Find Bodies

DIEPPE, France, Jan. 22.—An air tragedy which cost at least five lives was revealed today with the finding of the shattered wreckage of a plane containing five mangled bodies at the base of a steep cliff near here.

The plane, an air "taxi," had been engaged by a number of young football fans who were returning home after witnessing a match at Amiens Sunday night. The plane was reported missing soon after leaving Amiens and a thorough search of the route today resulted in the finding of the wreckage.

One woman passenger was among the victims.

BOOTLEGGER SLAIN BY RIVAL GANGMEN

CLEVELAND, Jan. 22.—Liquor law violators were blamed by police here today for the slaying last night of Charles (Chuck) O'Neill, 31, reputed bootlegger.

O'Neill was "put on the spot" in his home as he sat drinking with his wife and Morris Asher shortly after they had returned from a movie, police said. Asher, who had recently been released from prison where he served a term for burglary, fled during the shooting.

Three shots were fired by O'Neill's assailants. Two of them entered O'Neill's head.

Police said they believed rival bootlegger interests were jealous of O'Neill's growing patronage and that he was slain to make way for redistribution of his customers.

EXPECT STIMSON TO ASK SUSPENSION OF BATTLESHIP PLANS

French And British To Offer Points For Discussion

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Points of wide interest to all the delegations attending the five-power naval conference were raised at the meeting of the French and British delegations at 10 Downing St. today, it was learned after the informal conference of the two delegations.

While it was understood that the Anglo-French discussions were centered upon the recent French memorandum and the British reply to that statement of French policy, it is believed several points of much wider interest to the assembled delegates than the Anglo-French documents were raised.

The issues raised were of such importance, it was indicated, that they were officially circulated among the other delegations this afternoon.

This was done to acquaint the delegates of the United States, Japan and Italy of their content in order to facilitate the discussions at the formal session of the conference at St. James' Palace tomorrow.

The fact the Anglo-French delegates lost no time in reaching broad issues of the parity was taken as a significant indication that no time would be lost at the conference in bringing to the fore the phases of disarmament regarded as predominant by all rather than by one or two of the delegations.

From its gaudy settings in the royal gallery of the house of lords the conference was transferred today to the private hotel rooms where most of the real work of reaching agreements on warship reduction and limitation will be consummated.

All of today will be given over to private conferences among the chief delegates so when they meet tomorrow at St. James' Palace, the delegation leaders can present their national programs in full knowledge of what the other fellows position is.

HOOVER ORDERS SILENCE

Washington Quiet On Negotiations Of Naval Reduction Parley

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—A policy of deep and prolonged silence is going to be in order on this side of the Atlantic during the period Secretary of State Stimson and the American delegation are negotiating in London for a reduction of world naval armaments.

President Hoover personally has decided on this rule, it was learned today, and word has gone down the line both in the state and navy departments that henceforth "silence is golden."

The executive has taken the position that the American delegates are eminently capable men, selected after a careful survey of the whole wide field, and are fully to be trusted to safeguard America's interests and negotiate the best possible agreement. Any statements and comments from this side, he is represented to feel, far from being helpful, actually might prove embarrassing to them.

And in this connection, Mr. Hoover himself is taking the initiative. He has had three press conferences since Stimson and his colleagues sailed—one of them yesterday after the London conference had opened—but he carefully ignored all questions on naval policy and the impending negotiations.

He had a number of them to ignore, too, for the many stories which have appeared over the past week end, alleging various things as new ideas to be proposed at London, inspired a majority of the written questions which were submitted to him in advance.

Mr. Hoover's no-talk dictum does not mean administration officials are going to sit back idle, however. The president and the state and navy departments will be kept fully informed as to what is taking place in London. Complete reports will be cabled back daily, and should the president ever desire to do so, the telephone company has let it be known he could be placed in telephonic touch with Stimson in a matter of only a few minutes.

But during the negotiations, the Hoover slogan is "Work now; talk later."

STAY OF EXECUTION UNTIL FEBRUARY 28 GRANTED DR. SNOOK

Supreme Court Gives Stay To Permit Defense Appeal

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 22.—Dr. James Howard Snook, confessed and convicted murderer of Miss Theora Hix, his sweetheart paragon, will not die until at least February 28.

The Ohio supreme court, late yesterday, granted the former Ohio State University professor another stay of execution until that date, to permit his attorneys to petition the highest tribunal in the land.

In rendering the decision of the state court, Chief Justice C. T. Marshall said: "A majority of the court grants Dr. Snook an extension of his stay until February 28."

The plea in behalf of Snook was made by Attorney E. O. Ricketts. He pointed out that unless the state court granted the stay, Mrs. Snook, wife of the condemned man, would be put at considerable expense to send attorneys to Washington to directly petition the federal court.

Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr., suffered his first defeat in the case of the co-ed's slayer, yesterday by the decision of the court.

The new date of execution is the fourth which has been set for the electrocution of Dr. Snook. Judge Henry Scarlett, who heard the case which involved one of the most brutal slayings in the history of the state, sentenced Snook to die on November 29, following his conviction, on August 14.

The court of appeals upheld the conviction but the supreme court granted a stay until December 20 to permit the case to be brought before that body. The court failed to act upon it by that time, and a further stay until January 31, was granted. The decision which was rendered yesterday, extended the execution date for four more weeks.

This latest stay expires three days after the United States supreme court reconvenes. Unless it is able to dispose of the motion for a review before that time, it is possible that that body may grant a further stay.

CHICAGO FACES MONEY CRISIS

Citizens Report Desperate Straits

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Complete financial collapse of Chicago's local government is only a matter of days, according to a report placed before the city today by Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the citizen's committee.

Chicago's situation is "critically desperate," the emergency group reported today following a frantic three-day search for some means to forestall the financial crisis facing the city, county and school board.

FALLS OVER STAIRS

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 22.—Mrs. Ella Barlach, 44, is in East Side Hospital here today with a fractured skull and a broken right arm as the result of a fifteen-foot fall from the second floor of her home late yesterday. Mrs. Barlach, according to witnesses, was leaning over the banister of the stairway, talking to a neighbor, when she slipped and fell.

SUGGESTED MERGER OF ALL PROTESTANT BODIES DISCUSSED

Canadian Minister Says Union Would Not Be Difficult

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 22.—Further consideration of a proposed consolidation of all Protestant churches was given today by prominent pastors and laymen, who are attending the centennial pentecostal celebration which is being held here this week.

Organization of interdenominational unity would be comparatively easy, according to James Endicott, former moderator of the United Church of Canada, who addressed delegates to the first meeting of the Ohio laymen's convention which is a part of centennial. Endicott, who was a young preacher in the more remote provinces of the Northwest several decades ago, described the development of the united church idea in Canada. The process which will bring about international unity is a slow one and must be followed cautiously, Endicott told his audience.

A proposal of a merger of the Ohio Council of Churches and the Ohio Council of Religious Education was made at yesterday's general meeting. The proposal is being met with enthusiasm by all delegates and looks as a possibility within a short time.

THREE MINERS THOUGHT DEAD

Four Entombed; One Rescued Alive

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 22.—Digging through fifty tons of coal and rock that collapsed in the mine of the Hudson Coal Company at Jermy, near here, rescuers early today discovered the feet of one of three missing miners sticking out from under the fall.

Four men were at work in that part of the mine when the cave came last yesterday.

Patrick McAndrew was rescued alive after being entombed two hours. His brother, William McAndrew, and Harold Van Sickle and James Charles, all of Jermy, are missing and are believed dead under the debris.

An hour before McAndrew was rescued Edmund Langan, priest of Jermy, administered the last rites of the church through the wall of coal that separated him from the trapped men.

PROPOSAL SEEMS TO HAVE BEST CHANCE OF HOOVER'S PLANS

House Debate Grows Warm On Poisoning Of Alcohol

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The proposed transfer of the government's prohibition enforcement army, 25,000 strong, from the treasury to the department of justice held the stage today in the wet and dry war on capitol hill.

This alone of all the recommendations made by President Hoover for tightening prohibition enforcement appeared to have anything like clear sailing through the legislative mills. The rest of the president's program, particularly that phase conferring police magistrate powers on U. S. commissioners, seemed headed for trouble and opposition.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon went before the house committee on executive expenditures this morning to endorse the transfer. He was to be followed by Atty. Gen. William D. Mitchell. Both Mellon and Mitchell have agreed the prohibition machine should be placed in the department of justice.

The wet and dry debate in the house meanwhile was concentrated on the government's practice of poisoning industrial alcohol. The wets, led by Rep. Sirovich (D) of N. Y., were fighting to halt the practice through the substitution of minor denaturants. Sirovich already has carried an appeal to President Hoover to stop the custom, although the executive is not likely to take action.

The dries were ready to defend the practice at any and all times. Representative Cramton (R) of Mich., declared the government had tried other methods of denaturing alcohol only to find that bootleggers easily adapted the alcohol for their illicit traffic. He heartily endorsed the present system of poisoning alcohol.

In the senate, wets and dries were preparing for hearings on measures carrying out the president's recommendation. George W. Wickensham, head of the president's law enforcement commission, and Dean Roscoe Pound, of Harvard, a member, were invited to appear tomorrow before a senate judiciary sub-committee, to explain the proposed transfer of the prohibition machine. Senator King (D) of Utah, chairman of the sub-committee, announced both members of the commission would appear and be heard at a public session. Later, the King committee will call Mellon, Mitchell and Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran.

The suggestion to increase the power of federal commissioners meanwhile faced opposition. The house judiciary sub-committee, of which Representative Christopher (R) of S. D., is chairman, will hold a public hearing Friday to air opposition, some of the dry leaders announcing they had not satisfied themselves the proposal was meritorious.

The plan to reduce punishment for "casual violators," however, met with greater approval. Senator Fess (R) of Ohio, joined with Representative Christopher in declaring the measure was necessary. "I think it entirely proper to define casual violations and to reduce the penalty for slight offenses," said Fess, a noted dry. "My only objection to the Jones act (the 5 and 10 law) was that it carried too severe penalties. I was afraid judges would not convict slight violators in the face of such heavy penalties. If the penalties are reduced, for casual violations, I believe it will have a healthy effect on improving enforcement of the law."

A few dries though have reserved judgment on the whole program. Senator Borah (R) of Ida., who started the recent controversy over enforcement conditions, has charged the plan to reduce penalties would result in a new "liquor licensing system." He said he feared the effect of any change, leading to the imposition of fines on violators since in jurisdictions where the courts were crowded, it might result in increased violation of the law.

As the blaze started just under the roof on one of his team-mates, Wayne Clayton, center, stumbled and fell on top of him. Paxson's head came in violent contact with the floor and his neck also twisted around and was strained. Clayton was not hurt.

An examination made by Dr. W. M. Hartinger, Spring Valley, disclosed a slight brain concussion, and Paxson was removed to McClellan Hospital at Xenia Wednesday. An X-ray will be taken to determine whether he may also have suffered a skull fracture.

Paxson is a member of the senior class at Bryan High School and is recognized as the outstanding player on the school's basketball team this season.

BASKETBALL PLAYER SEVERELY INJURED IN CONTEST TUESDAY

Lester Paxson, 17, star forward on the Bryan High School basketball team of Yellow Springs, suffered a slight concussion of the brain and possibly more serious injuries when he slipped and fell, his head striking the floor, in the third quarter of an exciting basketball game between Bellbrook and Bryan High Schools on the Bellbrook floor Tuesday night.

SENATE CONSIDERS HIDES AND LEATHER TARIFF SCHEDULES

Fight Anticipated As Blocs Sponsor Legislation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—With half a dozen blocs sponsoring legislation, the senate today entered consideration of the controversial hides and leather schedules of the new tariff bill.

A battle approaching the conflict over sugar rates was promised on these schedules, covering products used by nearly every one of America's 120,000,000. No other question except sugar rates so closely approaches the pocketbook of the entire nation.

The fight was centered on the basic duties on hides and skins of cattle, which the house took from the free list and imposed a 10 per cent duty on, the senate finance committee agreeing to those rates.

There were three principal groups lined up in the fight, those favoring the highest possible duties, a middle-ground group, and a low tariff advocates.

Opposition to the duty was led by those westerners who believe the increase in the nation's shoe bill would not be compensated by the advantage that the big packers would receive the benefits of the tariff rather than the raisers and that the American farmer would have to pay more for his shoes.

On the other hand, New England groups contended the shoe making industry had suffered depression as a result of inroads made by cheap importations of shoes manufactured by Czechoslovakian labor.

Approximately one-third of the $31,710,362 recommended for the department of justice is used in enforcement of prohibition, according to Chairman Wood (R) of Indiana.

The entire bill carries $113,799,256 for the four departments, compared with $112,149,121 last year.

Scofield for sentence.

FROST BLINDS BUS DRIVER AT RAIL CROSSING

Heartbroken Parents Identify Bodies Of Children

BEREA, O., Jan. 22.—Eleven school children and a bus driver were killed here today when the Brookpark school bus was rammed and demolished by a fast New York Central mail and passenger train.

Nine of the children and the driver were killed instantly.

The bus was driven by John Taylor of Brookpark village. Frost gathered on the windows of the bus apparently prevented Taylor from seeing the approaching flyer and the bus was hit while directly in the path of the train.

The bus approached the tracks from the south on Sheldon Road. Taylor, the driver stopped and the two trains, one traveling east and the other west, crossed the intersection. After they had passed, Taylor started across and the third train, the fast New York Central limited struck the bus with a terrific impact, overturning it and scattering wreckage on either side of the tracks.

The dead, so far identified: John Taylor, driver; William Davidson, 11; Vernon Davidson, 11; Jacob Walter, Jr., 12; Juanetta Walter, 9; Rita Zielski, 9; Vincent Zielski, 10; Dorothy Zielski, 16; William Pastorek, 9; Evelyn Koltanbach, 7. The injured: Ethel Davidson, 12.

Between fifteen and twenty children were riding in the bus on their way to Brookpark school. The engineer of the train, was John Hand of Toledo. He told Trainmaster A. H. Hancock of Ellyria, when the flyer stopped there after the crash that neither he nor the fireman on the train saw the approaching bus. He said the train was traveling at the rate of about forty-five miles an hour.

There is an incline at that point or the train would have been going in excess of sixty miles per hour. Hand said. The train had an unobstructed view when approaching the crossing. The scene of the crash is a rural, unguarded crossing just east of the city limits of Berea.

Debris of the demolished bus and mangled bodies of the children were scattered along the tracks for a distance of more than 500 yards. In the cases of the dead, the bodies were mangled almost beyond recognition.

Immediately after the crash, teachers at Brookpark School notified of the accident, hurried to the homes of the children to notify the parents.

Then began a frantic trek from the little Brookpark village to the Berea mortuaries and hospital. Identification was difficult and heart-rending as each case the train to home brothers and sisters.

In all cases, officials reported, the dead children were almost decapitated. In ever case the skull was taken off just above the ears.

The bus was accustomed to make three trips from the homes to the school, and consequently checking the victims was not as difficult as was first anticipated. With the first news of the crash, teachers of the school obtained a list of the pupils scheduled for that particular trip and hurriedly made trips to the homes to notify parents.

Arch Dunn of Berea, was one of the early arrivals on the scene of the ghastly tragedy. "It was a horrible nightmare," Dunham said. "The bodies of those poor children were scattered along the tracks and tangled up in the wreckage. It was awful. Some of the children were wedged so tightly in the wreckage that it was almost impossible to extricate them."

All of the children were unconscious and blood-spattered so that it was hard to tell which ones were dead. As fast as we could, we got the children free from the wreckage and rushed them to a hospital in Berea.

at the sessions today and tomorrow assure the greatest frankness of expression, which was held impossible at meetings such as that of yesterday. The chiefs of the various delegations are fearful of making public their claims in advance because of the probable necessity of retreating as the parley proceeds.

International News Service understands that at tomorrow's session, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, chief of the American delegation, will propose in the name of the United States postponement of all battleship replacements until 1935, thus giving the conference something tangible to chew on.

This proposal being accepted in principle by the British and Japanese, which are the only powers concerned, it is estimated this naval building "holiday" will save the trio of naval powers approximately $2,000,000,000 during the next six years.

In the opinion of many qualified observers, this "holiday" compromise is the chief ultimate accomplishment of the conference, for France has already made it emphatically clear that she does not intend to accept drastic limitation of her naval auxiliaries.

France's position, particularly her claim for an 800,000 ton allotment for all auxiliaries, was strongly presented to the British and American delegates by Premier Andre Tardieu and foreign minister Aristide Briand at a private dinner at the London home of Keith Merrill last night, attended by Secretary Stimson, Dwight W. Morrow, Premier Ramsay MacDonald and British Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson.

Premier Tardieu's position is regarded as exceedingly strong as France's financial situation is excellent, having a gold reserve second only to that of the United States and colonial possessions second only to those of Great Britain. Furthermore, he is supported by almost unanimous public opinion at home, which favors definite improvement of the French naval position.

There is no pacifist, utter disarmament sentiment in France comparable to what both Secretary Stimson and Premier MacDonald have.

This latter sentiment in America is expressing itself in numerous "crack-pot" cables of memorials and resolutions by pacifist societies back home now reaching the American delegates, here. The American delegation has been embarrassed by continued stories from Washington appearing in the British press to the effect that President Hoover is agreeable to abolishing battleships entirely.

It can be stated in strongest terms that battleships will not be abolished here, although eventual abolition will be discussed academically and idealistically the same as eventual utter disarmament has been and will be discussed.

One delegate informed International News Service somewhat irritably when discussing the battle ship question: "You can state positively that the American delegation will do nothing here to impair the relative efficiency of the American fleet."

This same authority said that the United States is willing to consider reduction in the size of battleships to 25,000 tons but no lower, and it is understood that the naval experts opposed this step.

The Americans consider that much of the agitation the British are kicking up over battleships is for political consumption, as the admiralty "greybeards" are as much wedded to battleships as the American general board.

When it is remembered that France and Japan are demanding almost parity in auxiliaries, it is readily seen that the American and British battleships may represent the practicable margin of their naval superiority.

The French and British delegation held an informal conference at 10 Downing St., this morning, when the agenda of the parley was discussed in some detail. It was announced that a speech to be made by Premier MacDonald at 6 p. m. tonight (1 p. m. Eastern Standard time) will be broadcast to the United States.

Tomorrow's session at St. James' Palace will be largely of a political character, the chief delegates exposing their national positions with the least possible reference to ships, guns, ratios and figures. The session will also discuss the agenda to be considered after Thursday's session. This program has not yet been decided upon.

The opening session at the royal palace will be limited to fifteen representatives of each power, because seventy-five is the capacity of Queen Anne's drawing room, where the meeting will be held.

Chief delegates of the powers and their naval advisors will be present but the press will be excluded. An officer of each delegation will later report the proceedings to journalists, at least partially. The same procedure will be followed at future meetings of the conference in committee.

The American delegation, including its naval advisors, held a family meeting at the Ritz Hotel this morning for the purpose of acquainting all with what has been done since the arrival in London, particularly with regard to the conversations with the French and Italian delegates.

It was explained that these conversations, as well as the British conversations with the French and Italian delegates, are necessary to clear away the underbrush and bringing the French and Italians up to date on what occurred during the historic meetings between Prime Minister MacDonald and President Hoover. They are likely to continue a week or more before the conference actually gets down to cases.

All day long the delegates were busy exchanging calls. Colonel Stimson saw Premier MacDonald at Downing St. at 12:45 o'clock this afternoon. Later the secretary of state held a consultation with former Premier Wakatsuki of Japan.

During the afternoon, Ambassador Dawes and Senators Reed and Robinson visited the Japanese delegates.

Later this afternoon, Premier MacDonald was to receive Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy in the house of commons. The premier was to receive Mr. Wakatsuki at Downing St. this evening.

EVERY CHILD IS MUSICAL

School Music Supervisor Says America Due For Musical Development; Urges Training

THE child who isn't musical doesn't exist.

This is the opinion of William Hugh Miller, public school music supervisor. Mr. Miller has followed the music profession for a number of years and has yet to find the first child who is not receptive to music, he says.

"Every so often," says Mr. Miller, "the mother of a youngster who thinks he doesn't like music or hasn't 'any ear' for music will inquire about the advisability of giving her child an opportunity for musical instruction. If the child is normal, the answer is invariably in the affirmative. Every person in the world is born with some degree of musical potentiality. The normal child responds readily to the fundamental elements in music.

"This doesn't mean that every child is a future Schumann-Heink or a Paderewski. But almost any child, if given the opportunity, would make excellent progress and bring happiness to himself and others for the rest of his life. Some of these might conceivably develop into artists of the first rank, but what America needs, if it becomes a more musical nation, is more musical amateurs.

"Every child should have his chance in music. No one who has had the right kind of musical training has ever regretted it, and there are scores right in this community who are sorry that they did not learn more about music when they had the opportunity."

America is on the threshold of great things in music, Mr. Miller believes. "Up to the present, political and industrial problems have engaged most of our efforts but the time has every earmark of being ripe for new musical development. America has passed the infant stage when earning a living vitalizes every activity. We have the leisure, the means, not only to enjoy but to create the settings which appeal to our aesthetic na-

PRIVATE EXCHANGE BEING INSTALLED AT O. S. & S. O. HOME

Carrying out an arrangement made with the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. several months ago by former Superintendent C. V. Burton, with approval of the trustee board, installation by the phone company of a private branch exchange at the O. S. & S. O. Home is taking place this week, according to Prot. J. E. Balmer, acting superintendent.

A thirty drop switchboard with twenty stations connecting every department at the institution is being installed. After they have been taught the work by an instructor, girl operators from the Home will be placed in charge of the switchboard in the main building.

For the purpose of installing a milk pasteurization plant, another detail of Major Burton's improvement program at the institution, work was also started this week in fitting up a room connecting with the kitchen. Milk will be bottled with only one handling.

MERCURY HERE DROPS; SNOW FALL 5 INCHES

Xenia was in the grip Wednesday of another cold wave, which this time sent the mercury down to two degrees above zero when a reading was made by Weatherman Ernest Harner at 8 a. m. the official observation hour, at the Xenia weather observatory.

There is a comforting prediction of "fair and warmer" for Thursday, however.

One inch of snowfall accompanied the cold wave over night Tuesday and thus far within the last few days the city has had a total of five inches of snow.

Fair weather is expected to prevail all day Wednesday with slowly rising temperatures.

Although no more snow was expected to fall Wednesday motorists still skidded around on the snow which fell previously and made driving treacherous.

Poems that Live

SONG

WHEN I am dead, my dearest,
Sing no sad songs for me;
Plant thou no roses at my head,
Nor shady cypress-tree:
Be the green grass above me
With showers and dew drops wet;
And if thou wilt, remember,
And if thou wilt, forget.

I shall not see the shadows,
I shall not feel the rain,<
I shall not hear the nightingale
Sing on, as if in pain:
And dreaming through the twilight
That doth not rise nor set,
Haply I may remember
And haply may I forget.

—Christina G. Rossetti (1830-1894)

THROUGH THE MICROPHONE

BY BROADCASTER

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The National Broadcasting Company has announced that bulletins will be broadcast daily from London while the big conference on naval disarmament is being held in St. James Palace.

William Hard is the NBC's observer at the conference and his daily summaries will be relayed across the Atlantic at approximately 1 p. m. (E. S. T.) and then rebroadcast through a nation-wide hookup of studios.

The opening address of King George V and complete details of the opening ceremonies January 21 were a special feature on radio networks here and abroad the first day of the conference. Although the royal address and other features were picked up about noon in England, this program reached American listeners at approximately 6 a. m.

For the first time in history, the entire population of the United States will be able to observe international history in the making as a result of the broadcasts.

"We embrace this opportunity to place our combined resources for unusual service at the disposal of the American public," M. H. Aylesworth, president of the NBC declared, "because it demonstrates as we have long wished to demonstrate the potentialities of radio as an instrument of world-wide understanding and sympathy.

"It is highly appropriate that this endeavor should go hand in hand with such epoch making attempts to lay a secure foundation for lasting peace among nations. We only hope there may be further occasions for radio to lend its instant assistance to such noble undertakings."

"No matter how many good qualities a radio receiver possesses it cannot give satisfaction unless it is sufficiently sensitive and selective to meet the crowded condition of the ether which it must face. It may be capable of the most perfect quality of reproduction; it may be easy to tune and it may give plenty of volume, but, if it jumbles the programs of two stations together, its good qualities are useless. For this reason, selectivity, especially in congested areas, is of the utmost importance," says J. A. Dowie, Chief Instructor of the

YOU PAY LESS AT

Kennedy's

39 West Main

National Radio Institute of Washington, D. C.

"There is a very definite limit, however, to the selectivity allowable in a receiving set used for the reception of voice or music, for in order to receive these, it is necessary to receive equally well, not merely a single wave length or frequency, while listening to a given station, but a channel of frequencies about 10,000 cycles wide. For example, suppose we wish to listen to a broadcasting station whose frequency is 950 kc. A receiving set that is so selective as to receive only this frequency would not be able to pick up voice or music from that station. The receiving set should, therefore, be made so as to receive equally well, and all at once, all frequencies from about 945 to 955 kc. while listening to that 950 kc station. Furthermore, if the selectivity of the receiving set is to be the best possible, all frequencies below 945 kc. and all above 955 kc. should at the same time, be completely rejected.

"In other words the ideal receiving set should be like a slit or a door that opens only wide enough to let in the desired music and speech. (In order to carry out this simile, we may say that good quality music is about 10 kc. wide, while 4 kc. is wide as a range of speech needs to be satisfactorily natural and understandable). If the door is not opened wide enough, the side bands will be pinched and the quality of the received voice or music will suffer. On the other hand, if the door is opened wider than necessary, there is just so much more room for static and other interfering outside noises to get in the receiving set."

Don't neglect a COLD

DISTRESSING cold in chest or throat—that so often leads to something serious—generally responds to good old Musterole with the first application. Should be more effective if used once every hour for five hours.

Working like the trained hands of a masseur, this famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other helpful ingredients brings relief naturally. It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by doctors and nurses.

Keep Musterole handy—jars and tubes. To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

GOD GLORIFIED—Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

GENERALLY BECAUSE HE CHOOSES

"I'd have gone straight for the last few years, but the police wouldn't let me." This is a statement often heard from persons convicted of law violations, made to serve time and later released. By falling back on such a moth eaten plea, a man merely admits that he has not been "straight." Undoubtedly the police are hard handed at times, and they are obliged to keep an eye on people with bad records and shady habits and associates; but in this day and age, the person who has made a misstep and wants to forsake his evil ways can find a way to do so, if he really tries. There are always individuals and societies ready to help. Police frequently are glad to see a change of heart that relieves them of one of their anxieties. In case bad associations are the difficulty, the country is wide, and the means of earning an honest living are plentiful. In other words the crook who remains a crook does so because he chooses to remain one and, very seldom, because of persecution by authorities.

TO DETERMINE FOR HEALTH

"I Resolve—
To keep my health! To do my work! To live!
To see to it I grow and gain and give!
Never to look behind me for an hour!
To wait in weakness, and to walk in power;
But always fronting onward to the light.
Ever and always facing toward the right.
Robbed, starved, defeated, fallen, wide astray—
On, with what strength I have! Back to the way!"
—Charlotte Perkins Gilman.

These are the days of Great Resolution. In accord with ancient and honorable custom, thousands of persons, at this time of year, now resolve to do, or not to do, many things during the year 1930 that they have done, or not done, heretofore. Bad habits are to be disdainfully cast aside, and the New Year is to be filled with good deeds, to be replete with better life and living. These character readjustments are all optimistically anticipated, and a few days later—many of them have been cast aside by most of us. The Old Adam persists, and the aftermath of most of the resolutions is much as Omar the Tentmaker put it. Indeed, indeed, Repentance oft before
I swore—but was I sober when I swore?
And then and then came spring, and Rose-in-hand
My threadbare Penitence apiece tore.

There are, however, a few every-day habits that could wisely be submitted to serious contemplation resulting in New Year's resolutions and sufficient gumption and back-bone to carry them on during the coming year. In spite of all contrary interests of present-day living, the real business of life is to live. With this in mind, some of these suggestions might be of value. So, for your health's sake, resolve:

- To have an annual physical examination—the sooner the better.
- To exercise in the open air daily.
- To eat moderately.
- To sleep sufficiently.
- To avoid excesses of all kinds.
- To take a real, conscientious, every-day interest in your health.
- Having thus resolved, be steadfast. So will 1930 be one of the healthiest and happiest of all the years; especially if the health inventory embodied in the first resolution is followed up advantageously, by having such defects as may be found promptly and fully remedied.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

FROM THE HEART

One reads from Carlyle: "If a book come from the heart, it will contrive to reach other hearts." And so it might be said that if words—daily words—come from the heart they contrive to reach other hearts. Few of us are fooled by words that merely come smoothly from the lips. No matter how appropriately and how graciously. No man can make great professions of friendship and convince another that he is indeed a friend—unless he really is one. Words, to convey ideas, are extremely important. Their value can hardly be overestimated. Words to convey honest emotion are of little importance. It is by the essence of personality and by a certain manner that one "gets across" feelings.

RARE

Voltaire once remarked that rare books were not worth anything because, if they were worth anything, they would not be rare. This, of course, is a quite inaccurate remark. In this instance Voltaire was too much of an optimist. He for the moment assumed that intellectual taste was such that there was naturally a demand for the extraordinary. Fact is nearly everybody wants commonplace things, whether in books or anything else.

COMMONPLACE

But speaking of the commonplace, most of life's really vital attributes and certainly many of its sweetest and most satisfying experiences are entirely in the realm of the commonplace. Rain and sleep, and food and rest are commonplace. Perhaps it was never said quite so well as by George Borrow, who wrote more than one beautiful book many years ago:

"Life is sweet, brother. Do you think so? There's night and day, brother, both sweet things. There's sun, moon and stars, brother, all sweet things. There's likewise a wind on the heath. Who would wish to die?"

PERHAPS SHOCKED, PERHAPS NOT

It has been said that the glory of the world would be lost in forgetfulness if God had not provided man with a remedy in books. One who does not keep the mind active and exercised by reading is sure of a flabby-headed old age. Pick and choose. Don't try to "keep up." Don't try to read everything. Read some things many times. Be entertained by some books; be instructed by others; master some others.

Bertrand Russell, heavy thinker with a smooth, sure touch in writing, presents the world with his ideas about Marriage and Morals in a new book under that title. Russell proceeds courageously along straight lines to his own conclusions. They may not be your conclusions. Liberal in many ways, he is conservative in others. You may be shocked or you may not be. At least you will be made to think and your mind will be exercised.

MANNERS AND TALKIES

Rev. Henry Darlington, New York Episcopal minister, says the talkies can teach good speech and good manners. They have the opportunity to set the standards for the people to follow. Good grammar and good pronunciation from the screen will have much influence.

THREE DOORS

When you call upon Lee Shubert at his place of business you are ushered into a little square room containing three doors. One of the doors is that by which you enter. The second opens into the hallway of the building; the third admits you to the Eminent One's office. Few achieve the distinction of passing through the third door. Others agree that it is a solemn and substantial thing to think you're being ushered into the private office and the next minute find yourself in the corridor on the way out.

OLD YARN COMES TO LIGHT AGAIN
The newest story is the one that is longest forgotten.

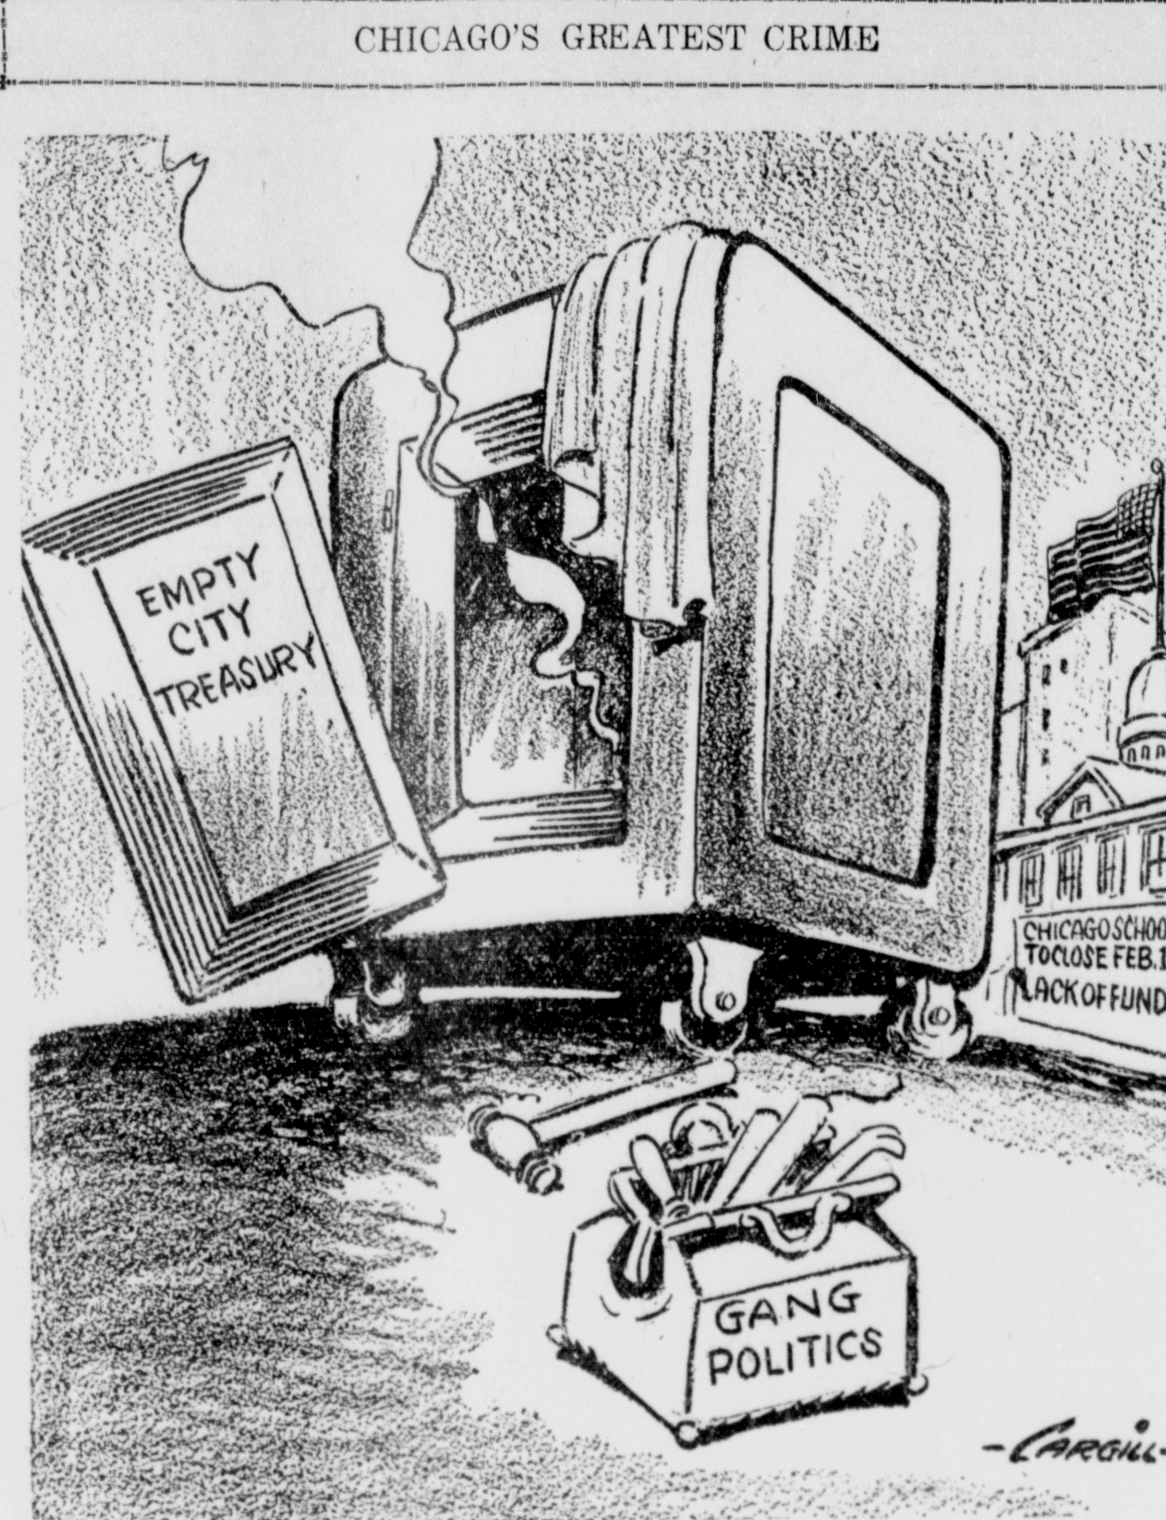

They're giggling on Longacre Square today over the wheeze of the clothing salesman who tried to unload a suit on the famous Twins on the strength of the fact that it had two pairs of pants.

READING THE STARS
The line of demarcation between Park avenue and Hell's Kitchen may be deep; but it isn't very wide. Both respond to the same old human motivation. Both cling to the present, because they know it. Both sigh over the past. Both dread the future and every little while try to peer through a knothole in the high-walled fence that divides the immediate from the Ultimate.

When the Duchess of Twain wishes to pry into the future she chur-chugs across to the Carnegie Hall studio of Evangeline Adams and satisfies her yearning with a dose of astrology.

When Mrs. Clendennin McSwat, of Ninth avenue, is beset by dim forebodings concerning tomorrow she journeys to the nearby establishment of Mme. La Fague, who for two bits, will tear aside the portals of the future by means of tea leaves, coffee grounds, cards or phenology.

You have no idea what a slant on the future a Tenement Town phenologist affords her client, nor what an army of them there are, playing their gentle calling among the more modest levels of the Big Town.

House Becomes Balky as Election Time Nears

WASHINGTON—Prophecy is a tough job in Washington these times, with the senate and the house of representatives acting as they do.

After they have acted, it occasionally is possible to figure out the reason why, but to calculate accurately in advance how they are going to act is worse than guessing on the races.

The senate started in upsetting all the prognosticators' reckonings soon after congress met in extra session last spring, and folk are so hardened to its queer doings now that hardly anything it can think of is sufficient to create a real sensation any more.

The representative, however, behaved for quite awhile in orthodox fashion enough. This was to have been expected, too, for the G. O. P. has an enormous majority in that branch of the national legislature, and usually it is only when the balance is pretty even that proceeding depart from the normal on Capitol hill. Nevertheless, of late, the house of representatives has begun playing as queer tricks as the senators.

Just before Christmas, be it remembered, a terrific row was kicked up in the senate over the leisurely manner in which President Hoover's commission on law enforcement was conducting its investigation. A report was demanded from it in strong terms.

Well, the commission has reported—all it has to report, up to date. And that is not much. The commissioners said they were not ready to report, anyway.

In short, the report is unsatisfactory; too meager.

NOW Mr. Hoover naturally meant to get the crime problem off his hands when he referred it to the Wickensham law enforcement commission; it follows that he does not want it dumped back on his desk at the White House.

Yet, the commission clearly is in no mood to be rushed. As reticent a body as it is, here is what was told to me, in plain terms, as its own offices the other day. "We commissioners are not receiving a cent for our work. We are sacrificing our personal interests to conduct this inquiry. If anyone has any fault to find with our system of conducting it, nothing will suit us better than to drop it and go home."

THUS, between a commission which threatens to quit if bothered and a formidable congressional group, which threatens to blow up otherwise, the danger was patent that the crime problem would land on the presidential desk again, whether or no.

In this dilemma Mr. Hoover suggested a joint committee of senators and representatives to receive the commission's report (which it was easy to foresee was not going to fill the bill) and carrying on, thenceforward.

That is to say, the idea was to transfer part of the load from the Wickensham commission to a joint congressional committee—with the commission still totting the other part—but with the committee so fixed as to have to take over the whole burden, if the commission should let go—leaving Mr. Hoover's desk as uncluttered as before.

The most unsophisticated person can see that this would be an excellent arrangement for Mr. Hoover, but not so excellent for congress. One would hardly have looked to see the senate acquiesce in it—because the senators are an unmanageable crew at best, with only about 16 Young Turks in it who can fairly be described as dependable Hoover-ites—the rest being a turbulent aggregation of Democrats, insurgent Progressives and Old Guardmen, who profess loyalty to the administration but disagree with it on almost every imaginable subject.

But the representatives looked more promising. The majority in that house does as its leaders decree. The leaders are: Speaker Longworth and Congressman Bertrand H. Snell and John Q. Tilson—three good "administration men." It was obvious that the representatives did not like the presidential proposal, but the assumption was that Longworth, Snell and Tilson would jam it through as a wise party measure, even though individuals might suffer.

WELL, the senate examined the scheme, made a wry face and agreed.

Longworth, Snell and Tilson turned it down cold.

It is understandable all right—the Longworth, Snell and Tilson policy. The triumvirate considered that it was asking too much of the representatives—compelling them to come out and declare themselves flatfooted on a lot of risky issues, with election just coming on. Still, the influence is unmistakable—they care more for their fellow representatives than they do for the nation's welfare. Hoover out of hot water. To be sure, they expressed themselves very gracefully—Longworth, Snell and Tilson. Just the same, they left the crime problem for President Hoover to worry over.

And the senate? Oh, that also is comprehensible—after the fact. The senators do not all come up for reelection in November, like the representatives—only a third of them. Enough G. O. P. hold-overs were available to help the White House out in a pinch "for the good of the party," even if not all of them were especially enthusiastic personally.

However, the senate alone cannot supply a joint committee.

Government Designs Suits

Play suits of a new type designed by the bureau of home economics of the United States department of agriculture, fill a long-felt need, says the bureau. The out-of-doors clothing usually worn in winter weather by children of pre-school age may answer the requirement of warmth, but it often hampers their natural activities and defeats the teaching of self-help in dressing, because it is too bulky and has complicated fastenings. In a new leaflet, No. 54-L, "Play Suits for Winter," Bess M. Viemont, one of the bureau's clothing specialists, tells how these suits she describes have been successfully tried out on children in a nursery school. The leaflet may be obtained from the office of information, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., as long as there is a supply available for free distribution.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

WHEN IS A LIZARD NOT A LIZARD?

What in the name of common sense was Uncle Merry Great Eye talking about? Lizard-Beetle looked less like a soldier than anyone Peter had ever met. Yet it was as plain to be seen as the nose on one's face that all the fellow's relatives—Uncle Merry and Biffer and the Tumble-Bugs, too, respected Lizard-Beetle. Why? Peter was still more puzzled when Lizard crawled into the open, and for the first time the boy saw the fellow as the fellow really was—a little lizard with six tiny legs at the front of a body certainly not over half an inch long. The blue and red tail moved ceaselessly. Peter could not keep his eyes off it. If it hadn't been for that tail, Peter would have passed the fellow by without a second glance. Peter's eye took in all this at a glance, and only a moment passed before Lizard-Beetle answered Uncle Merry's question.

"Of course I'm on duty today, Uncle Merry. I thought you knew me well enough not to ask such a foolish question. I am always tending to my business except when I sleep or when I rest in my cradle waiting to turn into my other self."

If Peter had been puzzled before, he was twice as much mixed up now. The conversation didn't seem to have any sense at all, now. Curiosity got the better of the boy, as it so often did, and he burst out with:

"Who ever heard of a lizard that fought. And who is your 'other self'?"

"One question at a time, stranger," said the fellow in the grass. "But let me set you right on one point, sir. I am no more lizard than you are. You can't tell a fellow by his tail and feet, and that's what you're judging me by. Give me them and a two weeks' furlough, and I'll turn into as fine a beetle as ever you saw—a beetle in a red coat trimmed with black spots, sir!"

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Lemon Juice

"DEAR DOCTOR: I am just a kid, but I am interested in everything you write. Will you please tell me what effect lemon juice has, when mixed with water and salt, on the alimentary canal, the lungs, heart and muscles of the body, and the blood? Am 5 feet one inch tall, and weigh 104 pounds. Is this my normal weight?"

Lemon juice is a good anti-scurvy food, and like other citrus fruits (and tomatoes), while acid to the taste, is alkaline in its final reaction. We should all have a preponderance of the alkali ash foods (in general, fruits, vegetables, nuts and milk) in our diets to maintain the normal slight alkaline reaction of the blood and tissue fluids. So then we can say that lemon juice is good for the "alimentary canal, the intestines, the stomach, the lungs, heart and muscles of the body, and the blood," and any other organ you can think of, dear Y. I wouldn't advise taking it with salt, as you might be getting too much salt, and excess salt is harmful.

Vinegar, in the amounts used on salads, for instance, does no harm to a healthy person, although it is not so healthful as lemon juice for salads.

Whether you are underweight depends upon your age. From your handwriting, we judge you are about 15? And in that case, your normal weight for your height is given as 108 pounds in the Wood-Baldwin tables.

From the tone of your letter, it sounds as though you were thinking of reducing, for vinegar and lemon juice are commonly believed to help reduce weight. Vinegar will, if taken in large amounts, because it will upset the intestinal tract. But this, of course, will bring on disorders worse than overweight. You shouldn't think of reducing, Y. If while growing it is better to be slightly over the average weight than under.

Iodin for the Tich-Mite
"Last summer I developed frightful itching on my body. I noticed small red lines and tiny pimples. I read your article, and Scabies decided that was I had. So I treated myself sulphur ointment as you suggested, and slowly I began to rid myself of the affliction. However, this summer, while on my vacation, I did not diligently use the ointment, as it came back. When I returned, I decided to try Iodin, as the ointment was so greasy. I smeared continually and diligently each spot that itched, and even got up during the night to do it. It killed all the mites that I had, and I wonder if you knew Iodin would do this."

MISS L.

There are quite a number of things mentioned in my textbook on skin diseases and scabies, but Iodin isn't among them. As such a simple remedy, I'm glad to know of it and pass it on. Other times, of course, what will help one person in a certain disorder will help another. But the tich-mite (scabies scabies) probably doesn't have the vagaries of man, and breed will be as susceptible to Iodin as another.

You would have to take the same precautions of sterilizing the clothes—the washables by washing, and the woolen ones by baking or ironing with a very hot iron, to destroy the mites that may have gotten on them.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am writing my letter in hopes it will help the girl who is in love with the married man who is the father of her child.

"To every man there openeth a high way and a low.

And every man decideth the way his soul shall go."

"Wouldn't more of us, perhaps, choose the high way, the right way if we were just sure of our path. If we knew which turns really led to the high and right way?"

"To my sorrow I took the low way. I want to help men and women from making the same mistakes I did. About 10 years ago I met a very lovable man. He asked me to marry him. I loved him dearly and consented. Then we began being wifely and husbandly.

"How do you suppose I felt when the news reached me that this man had a wife, had been married several years. The wife also found out about me. She begged me to stop. Oh, how I wish I had obeyed. She finally divorced her husband. We married, but am I contented like I thought I would be? No. I am very much in love with my husband, but my soul goes through a siege of torments every day. I know he belongs to his first wife.

"Don't take the low way. There is lots of misery in it."

You have made your mistake, and have suffered. Why not try to be happy and contented now? There is no use in playing the penitent sinner indefinitely. In your heart you will always know you did wrong, but you cannot help the wronged wife by eternal grief and chastisement of yourself. One punishment which you cannot escape, of course, is that you will never completely trust, while you may love, your husband.

Make up your mind that you will do all in your power, from now on, not only to live right, but to live happily. This letter of yours may do untold good by pointing out to girls who love unwisely that happiness does not follow wrong done to another.

There is plenty of work to do in the world, and helping to do it, and warning others not to follow.

BROKEN HEARTED You are altogether too young to marry at one, so wait until you are 18. At least that will give your boy friend time to show your grandpa that, although he has a bad record, he is worthy.

DESERTED FLORENCE Do little girl, so many young people your age feel as you do. You are over sensitive, for one thing, as your people are simply busy and don't realize that you need extra netting just now instead of less. They think of you as a "big it" who can get along, and they concentrate on the little sister and brother who demand attention.

Cheer up, dear, and make up your mind that you will be happy in a few years you will be a young lady and the most important member of your family.

TRUE LOU Stick to the man you care about, Lou, and tell him old boy friend you are through.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

It's a fatal truism that the little things in life make all the difference. We break camels' backs with straws and/or return haystacks looking for needles. A run in our stockings ruins our dispositions, and a delicious bon-bon sets them right again. And no where do little things count more than in our appearance. The sum total of a perfect effect is just the one plus one plus one of little often forgotten things.

The wrong rouge, the wrong lipstick powder that doesn't blend with your skin, gloves that aren't the right color, hose that don't match the gloves, a handkerchief not in keeping with a costume because it's too "sporty" or too lacy or too bright in color—these are the details to watch in planning your perfect ensemble.

This season the new mode has turned a spotlight on faces and clothes, making every detail doubly important, especially the smart accessories that make or mar a costume, and the ever important make-up. A perfect skin has always been the sine qua non of beauty, but today, with the off-the-face hats and coiffures and the subtly alluring, feminine styles, it is essential. No crowfeet, frown lines, no blackheads, coal pores or roughness can be allowed to destroy the ensemble effect. This well-groomed perfect lady.

This week I am going to write about the little things that you must watch to keep yourself looking perfectly groomed. And I begin by letting me make this suggestion. Form the mirror habit. Don't spend all your time preening before every mirror you pass. Nothing looks more ridiculous. But do make a habit of seeing how you look to other people.

You should have somewhere your home, preferably in your bedroom, one full length mirror so that you can see yourself from top to toe after dressing. Triple mirrors are also good, showing different sides of your face and head. But if you have one of these, learn to use it. You will always know yourself from every angle. And make a habit of using a mirror in the bright daylight. It may be cruelly frank, but at least it's truthful. If your mirror where a good friend strikes it, and look bravely every time you pass.

So as to admit all high schools, public and private into competition, the twelfth annual University of Chicago national interscholastic basketball tournament, to be held this year from April 1 to 5, has been widened in scope. The entry list again will be held to about fifty teams and the eligibility rules of the university must be met, however, as in former seasons.

The broadening of the competition means that the tournament will be open to academies, denominational and private schools, as well as public high schools. The extension is designed to give the winning quintet an even clearer right to the title of national champion.

The broadening, however, will bring any weakening of the eligibility rules. As in the past, all state champions automatically will be eligible, as will winners of leading sectional tournaments. Outstanding school fives in metropolitan districts also will be invited, while others with exceptional season records likewise may enter. H. O. Crisler, manager of the tournament, has invited all the scholastic teams in the country to submit their records for consideration.

Forty teams from thirty-three states took part in the tournament in 1929, twenty-nine of the number being state title-holders. The event was won by the Athens (Texas) team, which defeated Classen High of Oklahoma City, 25 to 21 in a thrilling final. Third place went to Jones, a quintet representing a little town in the prairie section of Colorado. Jackson, Mich., placed fourth.

This Shires fellow, who the other day lost a one-round decision to Judge Landis and agreed to give up his boxing career when the judge pointed out that boxing and baseball are incompatible, is a diversified athlete. Recently the Great Shires tried his hand at professional basketball and pronounced the game a cinch. He said the next sport he wanted to try was ice hockey. After that who knows but what he will nominate himself in an air race and then file an entry in a chess tournament. If he then branches out into football with a polo on the side he will be in the same class as Bill Haines, movie star, another boy who is always sticking his finger into everything in the line of sport.

Broadcasting in Chicago, Shires said that he got more publicity this winter than Judge Landis and didn't have to go without a hat at Christmas time to get it, either.

Xenia Central High officials should have no kick coming this season about the manner in which the Bucanier home games are being patronized by the fans. Indications are that the net profits for the 1929-30 season from basketball will be sufficiently great to enable the indoor sport to shoulder a goodly portion of a losing balance created by losses in football last season.

One reason for the huge crowds at the local games this season is that the home schedule is an unusually attractive one. Then too, the Bucaniers have a strong team, one that, however, raises the hopes of fans one week and then dashes them to pieces the next. It is that quality of uncertainty that makes the games interesting. Xenia is up one week and down the next. The one thing of which local followers of the team are certain is that whatever the result is, they will be well repaid for attending any Xenia game for an exciting contest is usually seen.

Schmeling Meets Winner Of Bout At Miami

WILL DECIDE TITLE AT YANKEE STADIUM IN MILK FUND FIGHT

Date Set For June 26;
Commission Lifts
Suspension

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Max Schmeling and the winner of the Sharkey-Scott fight at Miami will meet for the heavyweight championship of the world at Yankee Stadium on June 26, with the local milk fund and Madison Square Garden as joint-promoters. This isn't news. It's something even scarier than news—scarier than the heel prints of a hen. It's fact.

It isn't news because Schmeling, Sharkey and Scott, their managers, the milk fund people and Madison Square Garden have known it these many weeks. Among those who didn't know it were the jads who were wondering what they were going to use for money when the time came to pay Schmeling $250,000 for dawdling with some dumm at Atlantic City on March 31. This one seemed due for a run out by either party or both, so Mr. Joe Jacobs, who manages Schmeling any time the latter doesn't catch him at it, decided to jump the gun before it went off by mistake and hit somebody on purpose.

As a matter of fact, there's one thing to be said for Jacobs: He may start something too soon; he never stops it too late. He knows when to quit. They say it would have been worth Jacobs' job if Schmeling got back here to find that his first big fight was to be with a lot of promoters over the question of whether they meant dollars or were talking about the population when they said 250,000. To give them their due, they meant dollars. If Sharkey was to be in the other corner, and dish towels, if the dum-dum was to go with the party. They can't get Sharkey. He tied up with the garden recently. So did Scott. Therefore, Jacobs' run out yesterday wasn't a tragedy. It should have been $250,000 worth of relief. It must be a terrible strain, worrying about something you know you won't do.

They still are talking today about going after the Sharkey-Scott winner and thus holding Schmeling to his contract but it's no use. Not only are the Miami principals committed to the milk fund program but so is Schmeling himself. His Mr. Jacobs agreed to terms a month ago, just by way of showing that, of all the boxing men in the world, he liked himself the best. One of the "convincers" in this transaction involved the promise of the milk fund promoters to have the bowler removed from Herr Schmeling's brow by the local commission. The promise was promptly fulfilled, a fact that the commission tacitly admitted some weeks ago when it gave Herr Schmeling sixty days to accept the Sharkey-Scott winner for a title fight.

When the time comes, this won't take sixty minutes.

BELBROOK AHE AD AS ACCIDENT ENDS YELLOW SPRINGS GAME

Because of an unfortunate injury to one of the players on the visiting team the basketball game between Belbrook High and the Bryan team, slipped and fell, suffering a slight brain concussion when his head struck the floor. Up until the time he was injured Paxson had played a marvelous game, having collected eighteen of his team's twenty-two points. He had shot five baskets and added eight points from the foul line. C. Barton was the leading scorer for Belbrook with sixteen points.

The preliminary girls' game brought together two undefeated teams this season and the Belbrook sextet, which has not been beaten for two seasons, notched out a two-point victory over the hitherto undefeated Bryan High feminine team, 24 to 22, Belbrook leading at the half, 18 to 13. But the visitors almost, but not quite, overcame this advantage in the second semester. W. Peterson tallied twelve points for the winners and Basset contributed sixteen for Bryan High.

Belbrook girls' team has now beaten every feminine high school team in the county except Caesar Creek and is not scheduled to play the girls' sextet of this school.

A Friday night next week Belbrook boys will visit Germantown for a game with the Academy team there, Belbrook girls will be idle that night. The lineups:

MR. CLARENCE CHRISTMAN

Christman, Second and Maple Sts., Washington, C. H., Ohio, says what Konjola did for him, and then decide what you will let this new and totally different medicine do for you. Mr. Christman says:

"For five years I suffered terribly from indigestion, and no medicine helped me. For six weeks I had to leave my work I was so sick and weak. Even the lightest foods caused pain, and suffering interrupted my rest at night. I lost weight and strength. Then I started on Konjola. In two weeks I gained ten pounds. At the end of the third week I could eat the heaviest of food without the slightest discomfort. I am feeling better in every way, for Konjola cleansed and stimulated the organs of digestion and elimination. To all who suffer as I did my advice is this—give Konjola a chance to prove its worth."

Konjola is a new and different medicine of 22 ingredients, 22 of them the juices of roots and herbs long known for their medicinal value. Konjola works quickly and thoroughly at the very root, the fountain of the ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

Konjola is not designed to give mere temporary relief, but to bring new, glorious and lasting health. Konjola is sold in Xenia at Gallagher drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

FOUR GET HEARINGS ON LIQUOR CHARGES

Hearings were in progress in Common Pleas Court all day Wednesday before Judge R. L. Gowdy in the cases of four colored men, against whom liquor charges were filed as an outgrowth of sweeping raids conducted recently by county authorities and two undercover dry agents in Xenia and Yellow Springs.

Trials which got under way Wednesday morning were those of Melville Jackson, operator of a billiard parlor at Yellow Springs, accused of possessing liquor and keeping a place where liquor is sold; Forman Sanford, charged with selling liquor; and Charles Castle and Castle Dodge, both of Yellow Springs, accused respectively of selling and possessing liquor. Lodge and Castle were employed at Jackson's pool room.

PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

THE NEW OAKLAND 8

GENERAL MOTORS' Lowest-priced Eight—

$1045 AND UP

Three years of actual designing and testing preceded the announcement of the New Oakland Eight. In addition it incorporates General Motors' sixteen years' experience in building fine eight-cylinder automobiles. This mature background accounts for its sound basic design.

Superior Performance

The New Oakland has an 85-horsepower engine. This is the highest power ever employed in a car of Oakland's size and weight, racing cars excepted. Oakland develops one horsepower to 37 pounds of car weight. That's why few cars are as fast. That's why few, if any, can pass it on the hills. That's why it accelerates so rapidly. In fact, that is the reason for its superior performance.

Eight-Cylinder Performance

With its high speed and fast acceleration, the new Oakland combines the smoothness resulting from the overlapping power impulses inherent in eight-cylinder design. This smoothness is intensified by such features as its complete down-draft fuel distribution, its patented laminated spring and rubber engine mountings and a new type of cylinder head which assures uniform combustion. Only a close inspection and a demonstration will enable you to understand fully the many advantages provided by the New Oakland Eight.

The New Oakland Eight, $1045 and up, f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers, rear fender guards and spring covers extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

NEW SERIES PONTIAC BIG 6

A FAMOUS NAME—A Finer Car—

$745 AND UP

Once again Pontiac has improved upon a car already noted for its excellent qualities. To the hundreds of thousands who own Pontiacs, and to everyone interested in low-priced automobiles, this announcement is important. For it introduces the New Series Pontiac Big Six—a new and finer car with a famous name.

New Beauty, Smoothness, Safety

Smart new bodies by Fisher make the New Series Big Six a more beautiful Pontiac. Pontiac's smoothness is increased by a new type of rubber supports for its 60-horsepower engine.

Improved non-squeak four-wheel brakes and a new sloping non-glare windshield add to the car's safety.

Time-Tried Performance

When these and other improvements were being made, all of Pontiac's basic big car excellence was retained.

Come in. Let us show you the many advantages of this finer car with a famous name—the New Series Pontiac Big Six.

The New Series Pontiac Big Six, $745 and up, f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Shock absorbers standard equipment. Bumpers and spring covers at slight extra cost. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values. . . . Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery and the charge for any additional accessories or financing desired.

BRINGING UP FATHER

FOR THE LOVE OF PAT
BY C. L. WEBB © 1929

READ THIS FIRST:

Lieutenant Rex Dallard, Dr. Frank Gordon, and Nurse Margery Lynne, suspecting a plot to rob their new friend, Patricia Blair, Red Cross driver and heiress, and her twin brother, Jimmy, of their fortune, unite forces in Paris at the close of the World War. Patricia has been kidnapped, Jimmy disappears, and a fake "Jimmy" is taken back to New York by Herbert Maxwell, the twins' guardian, who is plotting to make away with the estate. Patricia is discovered, reveals the story of the Blair fortune and, with her friends, starts for New York when they learn that Maxwell has also taken the real Jimmy with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XV

The first great sorrow of their lives, or the first since they had been old enough to understand, came in the twins' sixteenth year, with the death of their father, James Kenilworth Blair. His passing left them entirely alone in sole possession of the family home, and, incidentally, to their own devices.

The twins were attending school at the time of their father's death; and considering the circumstances, the wording of the Blair will and all, (the will provided that Herbert F. Maxwell should act as guardian of the twins only as that duty affected the executorship of the Blair finances, applying in no respect to their personal conduct) everybody—which means the public—said their behavior was quite proper, entirely above reproach.

The will provided that all expenses of the household's upkeep be paid by the administrator, who one thousand dollars a month he paid each of the twins until their twenty-fifth birthday, when they were to be made sole administrators of their holdings, estimated then at twenty million dollars. What the legacies would represent in January of 1919 remained to be seen.

From the day when the provisions of James K. Blair's will were published life for James K. Jr. and Patricia Blair, two "poor little rich kids," became a fight to be human, remain decent and play the game. The final outcome, after two years of battling to obtain even a secondary school diploma, was the decision, mutually arrived at and agreed upon, to just quietly disappear from the old home city and take up the game of living where they were absolutely unknown. The old home was left in charge of a housekeeper.

New York received them—took them in just as they wanted to be taken, without any publicity. Both Jimmy and his twin sister, Patricia, had been graduated from Columbia University by the time the United States entered the World War. And, like many other young men and women with plenty of money, Jimmy and Pat were among the first to volunteer. Jimmy enlisted in the air corps. Pat offered her services as an ambulance driver, since she knew more about motors than the average auto mechanic.

All of which doesn't help Lieutenant Rex Dallard any in his trouble. The lieutenant, it will be recalled, had just "been to a funeral," so he had told himself, "of his last hopes." Oddly enough, as it happened, the lieutenant was not the only male of the quartet around which this story has been revolving who was nursing gloom in his breast that wintry morning. Dr. Frank Gordon was the other.

They were the crowded Whip's dining cabin, which had been converted into a cabaret for the occasion. Among these hundreds returning to America after many long months of varied war experiences, the spirit of conviviality was high. A string orchestra in the middle of the long room played appropriate airs.

At a table built for two, but around which four couples were seated in close formation, sat Dallard, Gordon, Pat and Margery. One of the two other couples had been married aboard ship on a license obtained in Paris just before sailing time. The bride had been a Canadian nurse. The bridegroom was a captain in a Canadian regiment. He had lost a leg in action. Gangrene had set in and the American nurse, Nellie Forbes, had taken charge of him. She had saved his life, the captain told his listeners, with glowing tribute.

The other man, an attaché of the American vice consulate, told of a glorious romance he had helped to consummate. Then the other girl, who had done Red Cross work, asked Pat the question direct: "Didn't you lose your heart to some one of the handsome soldiers you've met, Miss Blair?"

And apt, brave little soldier that she was herself, and wise, laughed her pleasing, musical laugh, and said:

"Oh, my goodness, yes! No less than six boys have each a cozy corner in my heart! Why be stingy? The instant a man begins to talk love to me I begin to be afraid! Pity the poor rich girl!"

Pat just smiled indifferently, as though the subject held no interest whatsoever for her. Which, as a matter of fact, was not wholly the truth. Margery, however, seemed to be imbued with the notion that it was her duty to make Pat "see the light of reason," as she designated it. So she said:

"Every man isn't a fortune hunter. And besides, how can a girl ever know real love if she's always afraid? I'm no multi-millionaire, but I've got some. And I'll let any man talk—if he's decent about it!"

"Good for you, sister!" commented the one-legged captain. Then the attaché declared he regretted the dismal fact that he was already a married man with one wife and three small children, else—

Lieutenant Dallard said nothing. Dr. Gordon said the same. The "glooms" were already at work. And the young person to blame had not the slightest idea of what she had done.

What comparatively poor man, with any pride or self-respect, after hearing a young heiress to ten million dollars tentatively admit that she is afraid of love because of fortune hunters—that every man, at heart, is a fortune hunter—is going to talk love to her?

However, had Rex Dallard and Frank Gordon heard what Pat Blair said to Margery the moment they had attained to the privacy of the stateroom they shared together, neither man, perhaps, would have felt quite as he did.

"I wish you hadn't said what you did tonight, Marge," she began, and there was a note of sadness in her softly modulated voice. "I mean," she went on, "about me being a trick cat. It puts me in rather an embarrassing light. People sometimes take wrong meanings, you know, from perfectly innocent remarks."

Margery Lynne turned swiftly, a quick flush dyeing her pretty face. "Oh, Pat, dear, I'm so sorry!" she quavered penitently. "You know I wouldn't say anything to wound or hurt you for the whole world! Forgive me, dear, won't you?"

"There's nothing to forgive, Marge, darling," replied the other, softly. "I know it was entirely unintentional on your part. I only mentioned it just now as a caution to you."

Both men, however, were too broad minded to allow their own private feelings to interfere with any matter they might consider to be their duty. And each felt he had a duty to perform in doing any and everything possible to help Pat Blair in her dealings with Herbert Maxwell.

It was of Maxwell the quartet had been speaking as the four of them stood huddled together under the lee of a cabin and watched the sights of New York harbor come into view. The two questions and the phantom query ever present in Pat Blair's mind were:

What had been Maxwell's purpose in bringing Jimmy back to New York? Or had Jimmy really reached New York? Could it be—? And there, the half-formed query hung, sheer dread preventing its completion. Anxiety, one could plainly see, was putting its mark on Pat.

The two men—both, as they honestly believed—hopelessly in love with her, noted the effects of her worry, and each man resolved to find Jimmy, or kill Maxwell if the boy were dead, as they feared.

The Theater

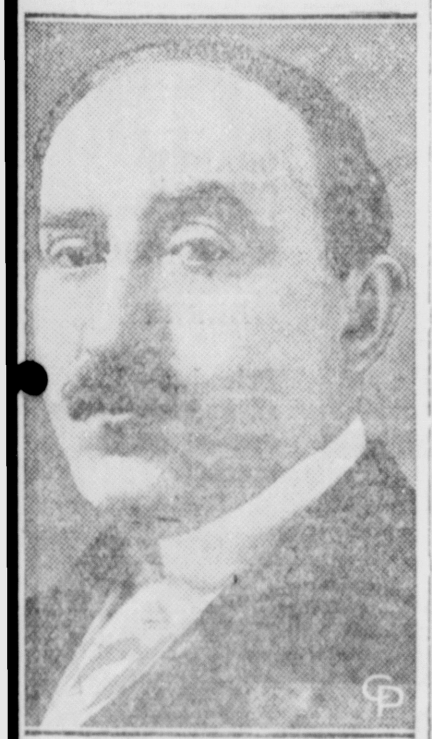

A group of theater owners, representing 233 theaters, has "gone to bat" for William Fox in his present financial difficulties has issued a statement expressing the belief that the Fox interests are solvent and will have a successful year.

This announcement comes on the heels of a petition for appointment of a receiver in equity for the Fox Film Corporation filed in federal court by Ira M. Gast, of Rutherford, N. J., one of the stockholders. Gast did not allege the insolvency or bankruptcy of the corporation, but declares the assets of the corporation should be preserved. Gast acted for himself and other stockholders.

The theater owners, representing theaters in twelve states, met with Fox, heard his story of the financial difficulties and examined auditors of the film company and of the

This writer does not feel competent to pass upon the judgment of the exhibitors as shown in their support of Fox, but assumes, as a matter of logic, that the days of financial difficulties for the company are past.

This is based on the assumption that these difficulties were caused by the introduction of the talkies. Fox has developed a strong production program with its Movie-tone and theaters are being better attended now, with the talkies, than ever, which should point a sanguine picture for the future of both corporations.

Fox Theaters Corporation. They were told by Fox that the two corporations can completely solve their problems with funds not to exceed $35,000,000.

The exhibitors found that net assets of Fox Film are $73,063,000; that the book value of film stock is $75,35; that the net earnings of the corporation for 1929 were $13,000,000 plus the non-recurring profit from the sale of First National stock to Warner Bros., amounting to $6,600,000.

They also found that the estimated profits of Fox Film for 1929 are $15,000,000; that the net assets of Fox Theaters Corporation are $63,050,000; that the book value of Fox Theaters stock is $37.63 a share; that the net earnings of Fox Theaters for 1929 were $2,748,000 and that the estimated profit of the theaters for 1929 is $5,000,000.

The investigation by the exhibitors led them to approve of the $35,000,000 issue of Fox Securities Corporation 7 per cent gold notes, designed to finance all outstanding liabilities and that the earnings of the two corporations are ample to retire the notes on or before maturity.

The group recommended to other theater owners that this financing will remove all financial difficulties; that it will insure continuance in the field of one of the important factors in film production; will result in creating a closer working relationship between the producer, the exhibitor and the public and will allow Fox companies to continue unhampered in

The injunction suit was the fourth filed by national banks of this county within the last few days based on the contention that the state law under which the valuation of capital stock of national banks is made is unconstitutional.

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

ADDING TO LIFE

I hope the life insurance companies will take seriously the proposal of Mr. Irene du Pont that they set aside 1/4 of per cent of their trust funds annually for a fund to support research with the object of adding years to the average human life.

One of the very few complaints I have to make against life on earth is that it isn't long enough. To me it seems a tragedy that such a glorious adventure should be so short. I do not believe that we should accept this brevity of life without some intelligent effort to lengthen it. We do not accept disease without an effort to cure it.

Nearly every optimistic lecturer will tell you that years have been added to human life "by science." This is a delusion produced by manipulation of figures. What medical science has done is to save the lives of thousands of babies. Millions, perhaps, would be nearer the truth. Babies who used to die in the first year of their lives are now brought through that critical first year by reason of scientific care and certain simple remedies. This survival of the babies through their first year adds to the average age at which death occurs, but it doesn't add anything to the life of the average adult. The person of 30 or 40 or 50 has no greater length of life before him now than he had at the time of the American Revolution, if I read the tables correctly.

Mr. Du Pont points out that the life insurance companies would be gainers if the average human life were extended. Of course, in the course of a generation or two, life insurance rates would be adjusted to the new mortality statistics, but meantime the insurance companies would win back the money they had spent in research, with interest.

This all sounds very sensible to me. I believe the average life can be added to very materially if scientific experiment and research can eliminate the common cold, or even reduce its frequency by half. I believe that this can be done, if enough earnest scientific workers devote themselves wholly to the problem, under favorable conditions, over a period of ten or fifteen years.

It would facilitate the research vastly if these workers could have human subjects with which to work. The influenza germ has been isolated by Chicago researchers, after years of experimenting with monkeys. But monkeys aren't humans. I wish that some of these life convicts, serving in prisons for murdering human beings, could be made available to the experimenters, so that such problems as the common cold could be solved under the most favorable conditions possible.

After all, these murderers owe something to society. Why not permit them to pay their debt by helping prolong all human life rather than keep them idle and useless in prisons that they are constantly burning down and blowing up?

I'm not for coddling murderers. Neither am I for torturing them. But I'm for giving them a chance to pay their debt to society.

A STATEMENT OF OLDSMOBILE-VIKING POLICY for 1930

A message of interest to everyone who expects to buy a car this year.

AT THIS TIME, when the public is accustomed to look for changes in motor car design, it is only natural that Olds Motor Works should make an announcement concerning both its policy and its products for the coming year.

Olds Motor Works is pledged to a policy of progress—a policy that promises, in part . . . "Changes in design solely for the sake of progress—never for the sake of change alone."

This policy, as it applies to the two products of Olds Motor Works, is briefly . . .

. . . to give still greater value in the Oldsmobile Six, the Fine Car of Low Price . . .

. . . to provide, in the Viking, a modern 90-degree, V-type Eight of high quality, at medium price.

Certain changes have been made in Oldsmobile design. These changes are chiefly in the body of the car, although advancements have also been made in the chassis. In every case, the changes tend to add to Oldsmobile value, without affecting its fundamental design.

Naturally, no changes have been made in the great Viking Eight. The Viking is a new car—a thoroughly modern 90-degree V-type Eight, incorporating advancements in V-eight design that establish it as one of the outstanding engineering achievements of recent years.

Olds Motor Works is pledged in both Oldsmobile and Viking to four great responsibilities: to design progressively—to build faithfully—to sell honestly—to service sincerely.

Thus, while Olds Motor Works builds two cars, in two major price classes, each represents the most progressive engineering thought, the finest manufacturing practice, and the best value it is possible to give at the price.

Now is the time to see these cars . . . to compare them with the latest offerings of the industry . . . and to make your own decision on value.
